McKinley's Speech.

Delegation of Old Soldiers from Chicago Visit Games

From the Chicago, Ill., Dispatch to the Washington Post.

The hand of friendship, a hand of motherly love, the hand of a soldier, and the hand of a citizen, all meet at the same time in the same heart to-day at the International Fair, the hand of the soldier being that of an old soldier, long years of service on the field of battle adding to the value of the hand of the citizen, and increasing the congeniality of the hand of the motherly love. A delegation of old soldiers have arrived here, 40 strong, and they are to make a speech to the people as representing the great army of the Republic. They are a people who have been the shepherds of the Republic, and who have been the guardians of the rights of the people. They are a people who have been the defenders of the Constitution, and who have been the guardians of the liberties of the people. They are a people who have been the defenders of the Union, and who have been the guardians of the peace of the people. They are a people who have been the defenders of the Republic, and who have been the guardians of the prosperity of the people.
