Willis Britton Conner, who has been the National Farm Bureau Federation's official representative at the United Nations, is in New York for the annual meeting of the United Nations Economic and Social Council. He will address the council on the subject of rural development and will discuss the role of the United Nations in promoting agricultural cooperation among member states.

The council will also hear reports from several other organizations, including the World Health Organization, the International Labour Organization, and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. The meeting is expected to focus on issues such as poverty reduction, climate change, and global health.

For more information, please visit the United Nations website or contact the representative of your country at the meeting.
