Laying Keel of Battleship Nebraska | Photos Taken for The Bee at Moran's Shipyard, Seattle, Wash. July 4, 1902

Governer Savage and McBride Driving the First Rivet.

PLACING THE KEEL PLATES IN POSITION.

Governer Savage Addressing the Assemblage.

Gleanings from the Story Tellers' Pack

"I am a poor man, and can't reward you as I should like, but remember that I have a high appreciation of your work. It was a very brave act, and I do not see how one so much as you dared to risk your life in doing it..."

"Well, continued the youthful hero, "he had my shoes and I didn't lose 'em, or dad wouldn't have liked me."

"Savage, I mean," said the Brooklyn interviewer, "you are the dog steady man..."

"And the nomination is—well, good, sir," and the next governor of New York disappeared from the scene.

When Flower was a small boy he fell into an air hole while skating. A constable found him out with much difficulty. Quite a crowd witnessed the life-saving exploit and applauded it. In due time Flower pies were informed of the incident and started to thank the rescuer. "My boy," he began, "it was a very gallant act, and one for which my son and I will always thank you as long as we live."