SECRET SERVICE

THE PRESIDENT ANSWERS HEMENWAY REPORT.

In Letter to Senator Hale, Mr. Roosevelt Calls It Inaccurate and Misleading.

Washington, Feb. 21—President Roosevelt to-day wrote to Senator Charles S. Hemenway, a courage and frank reply to the charge made by the Senator in his recent book against the President and the State Department.

The President said: "I had no occasion to use the word "deceitful" in referring to Mr. Lansing, but I certainly did not mean to intimate that he was anything but in good faith in his conduct of the State Department, or that the replies to my charge were inaccurate or misleading.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Though he did not mean to intimate that Mr. Lansing was deceiving the public about the intervention of the United States, he was certainly actuated by the will of the Congress and of the President to the idea of the intervention, and would have used the word "deceitful" in referring to him.

"I am not aware that Senator Hemenway has ever said that the President did not use the word "unfair" in referring to Mr. Lansing, but I am sure that he did not mean to intimate that he was anything but in good faith in his conduct of the State Department, or that the replies to my charge were inaccurate or misleading.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.

"I think it is necessary, in my answer to Senator Hemenway, to state more fully and definitely than I did in the speech referred to, the information on which I based my charge.

"I have now read Senator Hemenway's book, and I see that he is still insistent on that charge, and with evidence in this part of his book."

Although Senator Hemenway had been in the same cabinet as Mr. Lansing, he was not in the same cabinet as the President, and was not in the same cabinet as the Secretary of State.