NEW-YORK AT THE FAIR.

Bridges, Tunnels and Buildings Shown at St. Louis.

A new chapter in the history of American construction has been written in the exhibition of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at St. Louis, which is being held to-day. The exposition is devoted to the celebration of the Panama Canal, and the construction of the Panama Canal is one of the great engineering marvels of the world. The exposition is a monument to the American people, and the construction of the Panama Canal is a monument to the American people. The exposition is a monument to the American people, and the construction of the Panama Canal is a monument to the American people. The exposition is a monument to the American people, and the construction of the Panama Canal is a monument to the American people.