FOUR AMERICANS KILLED

The American Army took possession of the town of Pueblo on March 1.

Four Killed. Twenty Wounded.

General Washington had surrendered at Pueblo, and Maj. Gen. Custer, who represented the occupation of the town, was killed by the Confederates.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.

The war, which began in April, was fought between the American and Confederate forces. It lasted about a year and a half, and concluded in April 1861.