SILENT SHIPS SHOW REPUBLICS’ MAJESTY

By printing exclusively in three of its editions yesterday, the first real active pictures of the Mexican war, made by its own staff correspondent in Vera Cruz, the "Washington Times" scored one of its biggest picture feats in recent years.

Not only did it print exclusively a large set of photographs showing the American troops and vessels actually engaged in fighting, together with the effects of the battle at Vera Cruz, but it published the only pictures to be made by a Washington newspaper man at the front.

LIEUT. CHARLES M. MAIGNE, U. S. A., retired, the staff correspondent of the Times, was the trooper at Vera Cruz, was in the midst of the fighting which followed the landing of the American forces.

Lieutenant Maighe succeeded in snap-shooting a series of photographs unaided by any other photographers who may have been at the Mexican port at the time. These photographs, printed in the Times Sunday, late Special War Edition, yesterday, show the fighting on the various Mexican forts, and created as much interest and talk as any newspaper feat of recent years.

It is safe to say that no Washington newspaper has ever published a series of photographs that attracted as much attention as the Mexican war pictures. A new set of war stories from the Times correspondent is daily expected.

MORE AUTHENTIC PICTURES OF VERA CRUZ FIGHTING

Edward R. Peck, member of the war correspondents' corps, has just returned from Mexico, where he has been for some time covering the war and the Mexican situation, and today submits a series of photographs which will add greatly to the value of the recent display of Vera Cruz pictures.

LIEUT. CHARLES M. MAIGNE, U. S. A., retired, who is at the front with the American Forces at Vera Cruz, published the first authentic picture of the Mexican war yesterday, and it is to be expected that Lieutenant Maighe will keep up his work of photography along this line, as it is already proving of very great value to the American public.

These photographs are a real revelation of the Mexican war, and give a real and vivid idea of the fighting.

WASHINGTON MAN IS UNDER FIRE 5 DAYS

By American Correspondent in Bexar, Texas City.

Fear for American Customs Collector in Bexar City.

The American Customs collector in Bexar City, who was killed by the Mexican forces, is the subject of much admiration and sympathy.

Mr. James H. Johnson, a native of Bexar City, and who has been a resident of the city for many years, was killed by the Mexican forces.

The Customs collector, who was well known in the city, was shot while attempting to enter the American Customs Office.

The Customs collector was a brave and courageous man, and his death is a great loss to the city.
