$223,000 in Bonds Last Expert Quits Are Stolen in N. Y. U. S. Peace Mission

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—Sorbona bonds valued at $223,000 were stolen from the post office in the financial district here last night, according to reports received by the police. The number of bonds involved is not yet known, but they are believed to be worth at least $200,000. The thieves, who used a large bag and a coat with a hood, entered the post office through a rear window and made off with the bonds wrapped in a cloth. The police are now on the lookout for the thieves and are investigating the matter. It is believed that the thieves were well-organized and have knowledge of the post office. The police are hoping to recover the bonds soon. The bonds are due to be delivered to the Federal Reserve Bank on August 17.

URGENT REGULATION OF CAR MEN'S PAY

The idea is approaching maturity everywhere in the world, and a great deal of attention is being paid to the matter by employers of employees, as well as W. C. T. U. leaders in the country and the world. The idea is a movement to regulate wages and working conditions in the American automobile industry. The movement is being led by the United Automobile Workers of America, which was founded in 1935. The union is demanding that wages be increased, that working conditions be improved, and that the right to organize and to strike be guaranteed. The movement is gaining momentum and is expected to have a significant impact on the industry.
