The Bluejackets Cooking School on Goat Island

In San Francisco Bay
One of the Navy Department's Two Commissary Schools Trains Cooks, Bakers and Stewards for the Fighting Ships
Of the Pacific and Asiatic Fleets

By Ralph B. Campion:

A 1920 work of the Bluejackets and the Bluejackets, the Navy, and the Navy Department were responsible for the creation of the Bluejackets' Cooking School on Goat Island.

The school was founded in 1920 and has been operating continuously since then. The school
is one of the Navy Department's two
commissary schools,
and it trains cooks,
bakers, and stewards
for the fighting ships
of the Pacific and Asiatic Fleets.

The school is located on Goat Island in San Francisco Bay. The island is a small, wooded
island that is home
to a large number of birds and
wildlife.

The school's facilities include
a large kitchen,
where the students
learn the art of cooking. The students are taught how to prepare
a variety
of dishes,
including
seafood,
meat, and
vegetables.

The students
are also taught
how to
simple and
complex
meals,
and they are required to practice
what they learn.

curriculum
is designed to prepare
the students
for their future
careers
in the Navy,
where
they will be responsible for cooking
for
the sailors
on
ships.

The school
is funded
by
the
Navy,
and
students
are
paid
a small wage
for
their services.

The school
open
to
men
and
women,
and
it
provides a
chance
people
to
valuable
skill
future
in
the Navy.
