Washington, D. C., April 15.—By a vote of 199 to 88 the House of Representatives yesterday by a vote of 199 to 88 the House of Representatives yesterday yesterday yesterday yesterday yesterday, Congress rejected the naval program of the President that was submitted in the annual address of last week.

The debate, which was started by Mr. Bryan, of Mississippi, was continued by Mr. Tawney, of New York, and the closing debate was carried on by Mr. G. W. Redfield, of New Jersey. Mr. Redfield, who made an effective plea for the maintenance of the fleet, said:

"Mr. Speaker, I am not going to enter into a long debate upon a question which has been thoroughly discussed in this House. I am going to say simply that the great, we must have our fleet, and that it is not necessary for us to attempt to secure an appropriation for the construction of five battleships and one collier when the President is prepared to spend the money in the construction of four battleships and one collier."

Mr. Redfield, in answer to Mr. Tawney's question, said:

"Sir, I can answer for the people of the United States, and I can answer for the people of the United States."

The vote was a virtual defeat for the President, who had emphasized the needs of the country in his address and had asked for a largo appropriation for the construction of five battleships and one collier.

The debate continued until late in the evening, when the vote was taken, and it was carried by a large majority.
