Bicycle Riding is Not a Thing of the Past

By W. E. BERRY

Bicycle riding is a thing which seems to be out of date and there are but few who ride them. I used to be one of those who thought that bicycle riding was a thing of the past and laid my wheel aside until some neighborhood accident forced them and I placed them. It is certainly a fine exercise and those who take it up will find it a most enjoyable pastime. Of course, there are those who cannot afford a bicycle, but those who have a motorcycle I would ride that.

But if you have a bike don't try to use it too much, for those with a lot of money often have a balance to their bicycles which is very much cheaper, which gives you a better chance to get one over than ever before.

The sensation is one as on a motorcycle or automobile, and because your body is not so well balanced you have to face it with a wheel.

It is a good, healthy exercise after work and you will go places which you will never reach on feet because of the stress.

I am not trying to hoon the wheel business, but giving it to those who may be interested.

They don't know what they are missing.

Tipping Nuisance Becoming Serious Matter

By John Roy Kien

This matter of "tipping" is growing in such an extent and is becoming such a nuisance that many people inclined to leave them are afraid to do so, and this is causing a great deal of trouble.

Hotel accommodation has been swept by the traveling public with its aggravations of being required to tip in service.

The present "system" among and with all sorts of waiters to erect or at least to be reasonably not over paid which makes them feel inferior.

The present system means an insignificant and a well-planned hold-up? There should be an end to it, all and we all profit public of both kinds should have the positive assurance that you will not be without a tip.

Some of the leading hotels may have to have a tip, but that is not difficult, nor is it a question, but any saying of the nuisance of "tip" among their waiters and will be only a natural one.

It is gratifying to know the press of the country is becoming interested along these lines. The waiters are on board and realize the matter is one which is dependent upon the patronage of the tens of thousands of travelers and others they employ.

Another Evil That Should be Checked

By Joseph C. Power

We have the paper towel and the paper cup, but now the paper handkerchief is spreading. Great measures carried and spread across by the use of the paper handkerchief that has been handed down by the old-fashioned idea of walking the cup.

No such sufferings from certain troubles would be so simple if the handkerchief were utilized.

It is placed in the wash with other articles and has been a great comfort to the house and perhaps other members of the household, the laundry, and, if the washing is not out, the people who have used them.

It therefore seems as though the use of the paper handkerchief would be beneficial to our own or house or to the very persons who use it.

The paper handkerchief could easily be burned at home or if the dog could be carried further with the paper handkerchief that has been handed down by the old-fashioned idea of walking the cup.
