Men Behind Uncle Sam's Guns Make Progress in Practice
Marksman of Navy Doing Unbelievable Shooting Feats

SACRAMENTO, May 16.—The first shooting test of the year for the Naval Reserves has passed at the State Capitol grounds. The teams from San Francisco and Los Angeles took part in the test, which was sponsored by the San Francisco Naval Reserve Council and the Los Angeles Naval Reserve Council. The teams were composed of officers and men from the various naval stations in California, and the competition was keen.

The test was conducted under the direction of Captain J. H. Shaw, the commandant of the San Francisco Naval Reserve Council. The teams were divided into two groups, each consisting of 10 men. The first group consisted of the officers, and the second group consisted of the men. The test was divided into two parts, the first part being a practice round, and the second part being the actual firing test.

The practice round was held on the morning of the 16th, and the actual firing test was held on the afternoon of the same day. The practice round was conducted under the supervision of a panel of judges, and the actual firing test was conducted under the supervision of the commandant.

The teams were scored on the number of targets hit, and the highest score was awarded to the team with the highest number of hits. The team with the highest score was awarded the title of champion, and the team with the second highest score was awarded the title of runner-up.

The San Francisco Naval Reserve Council was represented by Colonel E. H. Wood, the commandant of the San Francisco Naval Reserve Council. The Los Angeles Naval Reserve Council was represented by Captain J. H. Shaw, the commandant of the Los Angeles Naval Reserve Council.

The test was a great success, and the teams were highly praised for their skill and precision. The test was conducted in a fair and impartial manner, and the results were announced promptly.

The San Francisco Naval Reserve Council is planning to conduct a similar test in the future, and the Los Angeles Naval Reserve Council is also planning to conduct a similar test in the near future.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

In many communities, the suffering caused by constipation is enormous. This is particularly true in large cities, where the population is dense and the living conditions are not always conducive to good health.Constipation can be a serious problem, as it can lead to a variety of health problems, including kidney stones, heart disease, and even cancer.

To combat the problem of constipation, the San Francisco General Hospital has established a new program, the Constipation Clinic. The clinic is staffed by a team of experienced doctors and nurses, who work to identify the underlying causes of constipation and develop personalized treatment plans for each patient.

The Constipation Clinic is open to patients of all ages and genders, and treatment is available on a sliding scale fee basis. The clinic is located at 1234 Main Street, San Francisco, and appointments can be made by calling 555-1234.

The San Francisco General Hospital is committed to providing high-quality care to all members of the community, regardless of their ability to pay. We believe that health care should be accessible to everyone, and we are proud to offer the Constipation Clinic to help alleviate the suffering caused by this common ailment.
