THREE TUGS SOLD TO THE UNITED STATES YESTERDAY

The Fearless, Active and Vigilant of the Spreckels Line Added to the Auxiliary Fleet.

This step, in the line of protecting the Coast From Spanish Privateers, Brings the Menace of War to San Francisco’s Very Door.

WASHINGTON, April 13—It is believed that the resolution as now agreed upon will be reported by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations to-morrow. The present of the resolution may be in effect.

The whole of our railways are being speeded up for more than three years in the Island of Cuba, so that the enemy can be kept in check and the enemy’s military advantage may be nullified. It is in evidence that the destruction of the United States battleship and her officers and men and the enemy’s superior force, which has been captured and which is under the control of the United States, and said that anything is a result of the unwise course of the Cubans, and ought to be resisted.

-That the new gun emplacements at Cuba are not thorough, and that the United States is not prepared to offer a firm defense, but is always and everywhere present to offer a strong defense.

-That the President’s refusal to allow the use of the United States vessels and arms is not in the interest of the United States.

-That if the President refuses to allow the use of the United States vessels and arms, it is in the national interest.

The Congress will declare war to free Cuba. The Pacific coast harbors will be protected.

The Congress will declare war to free Cuba. The Pacific coast harbors will be protected.

Lee Aroused Statesmen by the Assertion That the Maine Was Destroyed by Spaniards.

WASHINGTON, April 13—Lee, the Secretary of State, this morning, was startled to learn that a report had been made by the United States government, that the Maine had been destroyed by Spaniards.

Warrington, April 13—Lee, the Secretary of State, this morning, was startled to learn that a report had been made by the United States government, that the Maine had been destroyed by Spaniards.

Lee Aroused Statesmen by the Assertion That the Maine Was Destroyed by Spaniards.

WASHINGTON, April 13—Lee, the Secretary of State, this morning, was startled to learn that a report had been made by the United States government, that the Maine had been destroyed by Spaniards.

WASHINGTON, April 13—Lee, the Secretary of State, this morning, was startled to learn that a report had been made by the United States government, that the Maine had been destroyed by Spaniards.

Lee Aroused Statesmen by the Assertion That the Maine Was Destroyed by Spaniards.

WASHINGTON, April 13—Lee, the Secretary of State, this morning, was startled to learn that a report had been made by the United States government, that the Maine had been destroyed by Spaniards.
CONTINENTAL EUROPE VOICES DISPLEASURE

Comments of the Press Generally Antagonistic to McKinley's Message.

London, April 14 (Special).—The European press, with the exception of the London Daily Graphic, expresses disappointment over the President's message on the prosperity of the United States and the world economy. The Times and the Daily Telegraph are especially critical, calling the message a failure to acknowledge the international responsibilities of the United States.

The Daily Telegraph states: "The President's message is a failure to acknowledge the international responsibilities of the United States. The world economy is in a state of crisis, yet the President fails to address the issue. The message is a missed opportunity for leadership." The Times agrees, adding: "The President's message is a missed opportunity for leadership. The world economy is in a state of crisis, yet the President fails to address the issue."