SENATORS GIVE ROOSEVELT O. K. ON BROWNVILLE

Republican Pow-Wow
at White House
Ends Strife.

Blackburn Amendment
Will Be Tabled at the Finish.

President Roosevelt has won another victory over the Senate. As the price of peace within the Republican party the Senators will give their O. K. to his action in dismissing the colored troops.

This ratification will be contained in an amendment that the Republican majority of the Senate will force through as a substitute for the troublesome Blackburn amendment which for a time threatened to split the party in twain, and give to the Democratic minority the credit and glory of "standing by" the President. The Blackburn amendment will be tabled with the acquiescence of the President's friends, and the Democratic thunder will be stolen and drowned out in the more sonorous reverberation of a reunited majority vote.

White House Confab.

The above is in brief the agreement reached today at the biggest Senatorial pow-wow held this year at the White House. In response probably to an invitation conveyed either by telephone or messenger the Senators began to drop into the President's office by twos and threes before 10 o'clock, and inside of half an hour the arrivals had included Senators Knox, Spooner, Crane, Clapp, Warner, Warren, Hans-

SUMMONS JURY TO HEAR CASE OF STROTHERS

Judge Grimsley and Prosecuting Attorney Waite Withdraw From Any Part in Case.

CULPEPER, Va., Jan. 21.—Preliminary steps were taken today looking to an indictment in the Strother case, which, by the prominence of those involved and their wide relationship in the county, has prevented some of the officials, whose duty it is to bring accused people to justice, from serving in connection with the matter in any capacity.

The case is that of James A. and Philip Strother, who shot to death William F. Bywaters just after his forced marriage to their sister, Viola Strother, one of the belles of the county.

Judge A. M. Aiken, of Danville, today issued a summons for the impaneling of a grand jury at whose hands an indictment of the Strother men will be sought. Judge Aiken is presiding at the request of Judge Daniel A. Grimsley, the regular judge of this circuit, who is a relative of the dead Bywaters.

Charles M. Waite, prosecuting attorney for Adams county, has declined, for personal reasons, to prosecute the case, and has selected in his place John Keith, Commonwealth's attorney for Fauquier county, who, with Capt. Micajah Woods, of Charlottesville, will conduct the prosecution.

For the defense the following lawyers are here: Former Senator John L. Jeffries, now of Norfolk; John L. Lee, of Lynchburg; and Walton Moore, of Fairfax.

It is not believed that the trial of the Strothers will begin until the latter part of the week. The grand jury will not be assembled before tomorrow, and will not probably return its findings in the case until Wednesday afternoon or Thursday. When it does so, the defense, it is understood, will ask a postponement of the case.

HIGGINS SLOWLY GROWING WEAKER

OLEAN, N. Y., Jan. 21.—A bulletin this morning stated that there had been no change in the condition of former Gov. Frank W. Higgins. Late at night he had become weaker. The lessening of vitality being apparent, Dr. Hubbard, the family physician, said death might come at any moment.

President's Peace.

The Senate does not question either the justice or the legality of the President's action in dismissing, without honor, the troops of the Twenty-fifth Infantry.

brough, Alger, Piles, Carter, Dupont, and Patterson.

"An agreement is in sight," remarked Senator Crane as he left with Senator Spooner in an automobile.

"We will see if we can't clip the wings of the opposition by adopting an amendment that goes the Blackburn amendment one better," observed one of the Western Senators, who in the next breath asked that his name be withheld "for political reasons."

Bad Politics for Them.

"You see," he continued, "it would not be very good politics to let Mr. Blackburn's party have all the credit of supporting the President. Neither would it be good politics to vote down the Blackburn amendment, even if we had enough votes to do it, and the indications are that we haven't the votes if we wanted them. The only thing to do, therefore, is to pass something stronger, and a declaration that the Senate does not question the 'justice or legality' of the President's course, it seems to me, is the best possible move to make."

THAW'S TRIAL IS POSTPONED TO WEDNESDAY

Slavery of Stanford White Will Probably Plead to Temporary Insanity.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The trial of Harry Thaw, the Pittsburgh millionaire, for the slaying of Architect Stanford White last summer, was postponed today until next Wednesday, because of a delay in concluding the Hilbert "magic boots" case, on trial in Justice Fitzgerald's court.

Harry Thaw did not appear in court. All rules of court procedure were seemingly in this case, and he was only brought to the jury room in the rear of the court, where he remained until the formal proceedings of the adjournment were concluded when he was returned to the Tombs. The special panel of 150 talesmen was excused by the court until next Wednesday.

Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw awaited for her husband in the Tombs, while he was taken to the criminal courts building.

Rumors as to Defense.

Report has it this morning that Thaw's defense will be temporary insanity. Unable to find provocation for shooting White, his lawyers will try to prove that he was sane before the killing and is sane now. If the jury is satisfied that Thaw was insane from jealousy when he shot White, and that he is sane now, Thaw will go free. Lawyers say it is a long chance, but Thaw has always taken long chances. To escape the electric chair and the insane asylum is Thaw's determination, and he is ready to take it.

Jerome Confident of Verdict.

District Attorney Jerome believes that it will be a short trial. He declares that the case is simply one of brutal murder, and is the replica of scores of killings among the denizens of the Tenderloin. Mr. Jerome says the State can conclude its case within three or four days, though some time may be required to select a jury. The district attorney says that Thaw shot down Stanford White in cold blood, and that he did it without provocation, and was sane when he killed him.

Anxious Crowds on Hand.

Great crowds thronged the Criminal Courts building this morning to gain admittance to the court room where Thaw was to be tried. A squad of police were lined in front of the big oak doors, and only talesmen and witnesses were permitted to enter. Out in the street scores of people gathered to catch a glimpse of the young millionaire, who passed from the Tombs over the bridge of signs, to the court building.

Howard Nesbit in New York.

Howard Nesbit reached New York today. From the home of friends with whom he is stopping on the upper West Side he announced that he was ready at all to take the stand and testify against Harry K. Thaw. He is anxious to go before judge and jury in defense of his mother's honor, and the memory of the man who was his benefactor in life.

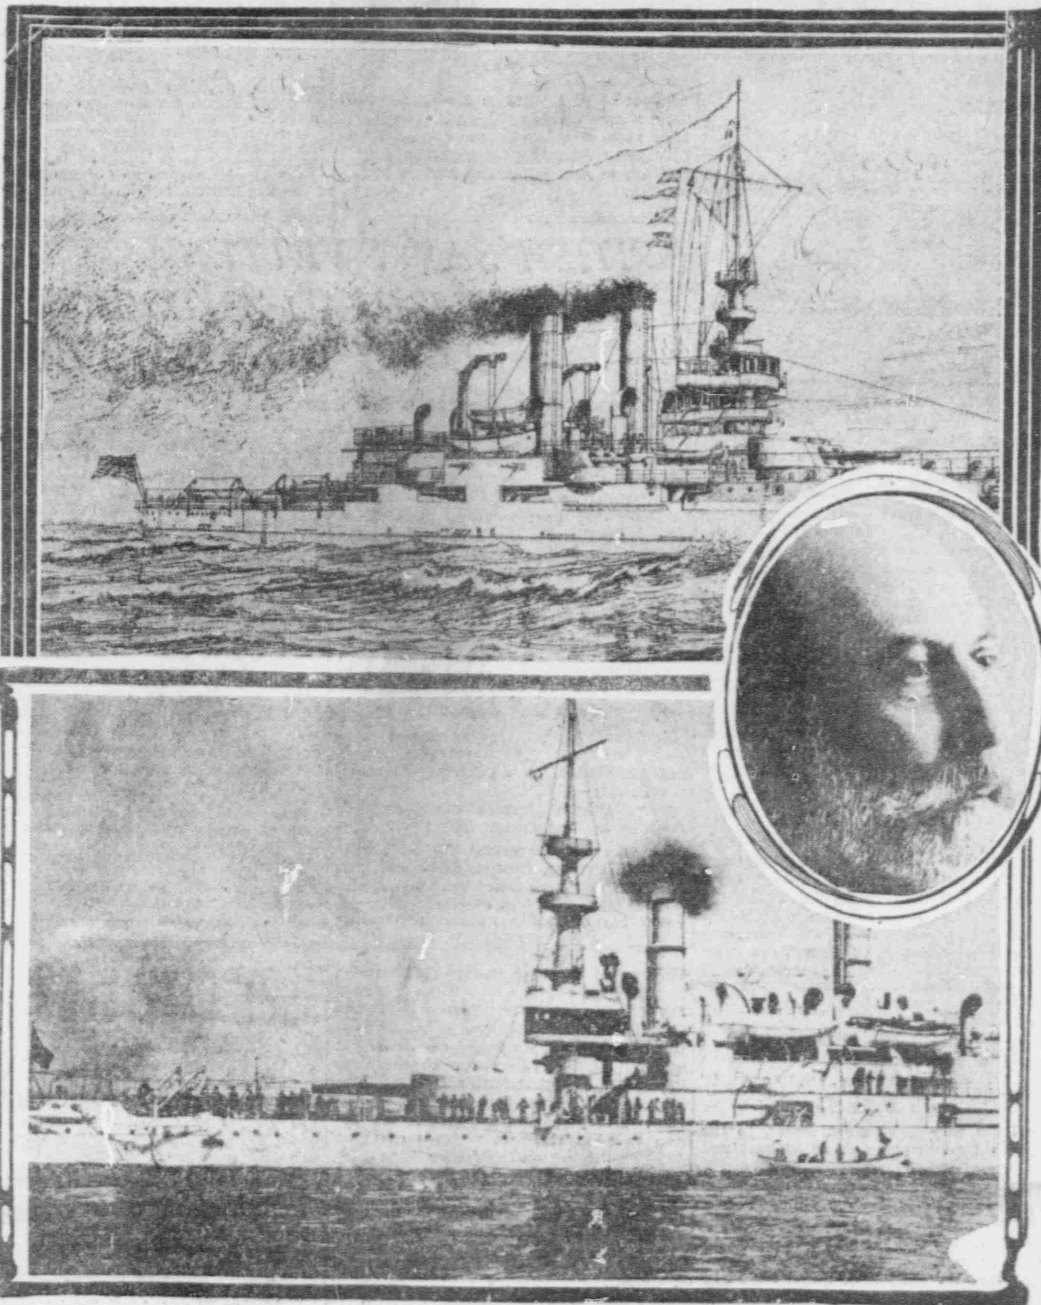

Later in the day he will visit District Attorney Jerome, and lay before him evidence which he declares will wreck the well-laid plans of the young slayer's great array of legal talent.

He is bitter against his brother-in-law, and will go even so far as to testify in contradiction of his sister, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who it has been decided to call in her husband's behalf.

"I SHOT TO KILL," SAYS MRS. BOWIE IN ENTERING PLEA

Pleads Guilty With Her Son to Murder of Young Posey, in Alleged Defense of "Sis" Bowie's Honor.

Another chapter in the Bowie-Posey tragedy near Indian Head will be written this afternoon, when the bullet-riddled body of Hubert Posey is laid to rest in the little burying plot back of the Methodist Church at Pisgah, Md. Indifferent, remorseless, and pleading justification for their act, Mrs. Mollie Bowie and Henry, who slew young Posey, are held on a charge of murder. They say they have no fear of the outcome of the trial, which will probably be given them in May.

After their arrest Mrs. Bowie and her son were taken to the store conducted by Bradley Davis, brother-in-law to the murdered man, where Justice of the Peace George Carpenter gave them a hearing.

"Mrs. Mollie Bowie you are charged with maliciously, deliberately, and willfully firing two pistol bullets into the body of Hubert Posey on January 18 and causing his death in Washington on January 19. How do you plead to this charge?" asked Judge Carpenter.

The woman stood erect. Her hands twitched nervously and opened and closed several times. Her eyes flashed at the mention of the name of her victim.

"Guilty," she replied as soon as the charge had been read. "Guilty. I shot him intentionally. I wanted to kill him."

Judge Carpenter read the charge to the son again. He answered just as promptly and deliberately as his first. Presenting a pathetic and touching spectacle, little "Sis" Bowie stood in the doorway, with sorrow and dejection written on her youthful face.

That the girl little realizes her predicament, there can be no doubt. She feels no remorse over the death of young Posey, because her relatives have taught her that a great injustice was done her by him.

Young Posey's body was placed aboard the Potomac steamer Harry Randall at London, Jan. 21.—The British government has cabled to Governor Swettenham peremptorily ordering him to explain his reasons for refusing the aid of the Americans and practically ordering the American fleet from Kingston harbor.

Serious Complications May Result From Jamaica Governor's Ordering Americans From Place.

The United States Government will make no demand upon Great Britain for the disciplining of Governor Swettenham of Jamaica, whose discourtesy caused the withdrawal of American warships from Kingston harbor. In spite of the fact that the governor has been for a long time most discourteous to Americans on the island and has done his utmost to hinder the exportation of Jamaican negroes to the Panama Canal, the Administration will pass the incident by without notice.

It is understood that the Government will make no representations to Great Britain whatever in the case, and should the British foreign office ask the State Department if this country wishes Governor Swettenham punished, Secretary Root will reply that the United States Government is entirely indifferent to the incident.

The governor's action, it is said, on high authority, will have no bearing whatever upon our attitude toward the British colonies, and, as an official of the administration said today:

"If another island blows up tomorrow we would immediately send ships with supplies and medical aid, as though the Jamaica incident had not occurred."

Governor Swettenham, an official of the State Department said today, has not only done his best to prevent laborers from Jamaica taking employment on the Panama canal, but has further shown his animus to the Americans by writing letters to the governors of other West Indian islands in which he urged them to follow his example.

State Officials Accused Of Not Playing Square

Officials of the State and Navy Departments are wrought up today over the withdrawal of the American warships from Kingston by request of the governor of Jamaica. The ships are now at Guantanamo, where they were reported by Admiral Evans this morning, and the report of the incident by Rear Admiral Davis is being anxiously awaited.

Officials of the navy claim the action of the Jamaican official was nothing short of an insult to the navy and consequently to the American Government, the aid being rushed to Kingston purely out of a spirit of humanity and friendliness.

State Department officials are more reticent, declaring they will await the full report of Admiral Davis and the consul at Kingston before giving out any expression. It is believed that they also would prefer to first hear from Great Britain concerning the incident.

INOPPORTUNE MOMENT.

The incident has occurred at an inopportune moment, officials state, since Secretary Root is out of the city. Officials, both of this Government and foreign powers, point out that such an incident is apt to lead to international complications, at a time when the Secretary of State is on a visit to the governor general of Canada, on what is officially termed a social visit, but which, it is accepted both in Washington and London, is expected to lead to more friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain and to a better understanding over questions between this country and Canada.

REFUGEE STEAMER ARRIVES AT BOSTON

BOSTON, Jan. 21.—Several hours ahead of the time she was expected the Admiral Sampson, one of the four steamers which the United Fruit Company runs between this city and Jamaica, arrived early this morning, bringing thirty-three Americans from the scene of Monday's earthquake.

The Admiral Sampson sailed from Port Antonio Wednesday, after having made a short trip to Kingston, where she picked up 100 refugees and brought them to Port Antonio. Many of these remained on board and took passage to the United States.

PROHIBITS CORPORATIONS GIVING CAMPAIGN FUNDS

The House this afternoon passed the Senate bill prohibiting corporations from making campaign contributions.

PRISONER KING DEAD AT LISBON.

LISBON, Jan. 21.—At the public hospital in Angra, Goughounhama, once an African King, later a prisoner, has died. His dominions extended over the Zambezi territory, Swaziland, Transvaal, and Natal, and he had an organized army of 10,000 men.

As soon as the Navy Department received the dispatch from Admiral Evans this morning a copy was sent to Robert Bacon, Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Bacon immediately went to the White House for a conference with the President on the subject.

Hot Shot for Bacon.

The action of Mr. Bacon in denying last night that the ships had left Kingston, stating emphatically that he knew they had not, has caused considerable comment in official circles today, since it became known that the State Department received information Saturday night to the effect that Admiral Davis had reported that the governor had suggested that he withdraw his ships, that his services were no longer needed, and resented the landing of bluejackets. This part of the dispatch was not given out for publication by the Navy Department.

In view of the situation, it appeared at noon today that a clash between State and Navy officials would not be surprising, since Acting Secretary of State Bacon was inclined to hold that if any misunderstanding occurred, Rear Admiral Davis must have been to blame. Such a suggestion was resented by a number of naval officials, who expressed themselves on the subject. They feel that such a reflection is in rather bad taste, since the navy, in rushing relief to Kingston, took a step which was calculated to aid the State Department in its relations with Great Britain, aside from the work of succoring those in distress.

Navy Department officials do not hesitate to characterize the action of Governor Swettenham of Jamaica as
