FIRST FOOTBALL GAME SLATED FOR HAMILTON

Hamilton, Nov. 18.—(Special).—Arrangements have been about completed for a football game here Saturday afternoon between the teams of the Stevensville and local high schools. Each aggregation has played but one game this season, so it is a little hard to get at their comparative strength. The victory of Stevensville over the heavy Victor eleven last Saturday seems to give the down-valley gridiron warriors a shade over the locals. The vaccination decree has upset the local team to some extent. Bursell, halfback, and O'Connell, center, having dropped out of school, "Honus" Muck has been shifted from full to half. Muck is the star of the local bunch and should do more effective ground gaining from his new position. The mass Saturday will be the first football game ever played in Hamilton.

HAMILTON FIREMEN WILL BAR "RAGGING"

Hamilton, Nov. 18.—(Special).—There will be no "ragging" or other imitation of the so-called up-to-date dances at the annual fireman's ball to be held in this city Thanksgiving eve, according to a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the local firemen when arrangements for the ball were made. In talking this morning of the firemen's action towards such dancing, F. L. Burns stated that it is the intention of the fire laddies to make the dance one which all classes of dance patrons can attend and one to which parents can send their young daughters without misgivings. Plans for the ball are now nicely under way and the event promises to eclipse any dance given by the department during its past history. The following committees were appointed at a recent meeting: Floor, Peter Gertz, Ned Taylor and Frank L. Burns; door, Lazim Adams and Charles Barnes; printing and advertising, Charles Butterfield, A. J. Horik and Ed Marx; tickets, W. A. Grush. The ball will be held in Eagles' hall.

GRANTING OF DIVORCE PRECEDES A WEDDING

Hamilton, Nov. 18.—(Special).—Agnes Killian was granted a divorce in the district court today and within a half hour from the time of the signing of the divorce decree she had departed on her second matrimonial voyage. As soon as the plaintiff was given a divorce from Asa Killian, William B. Paulds, a brother of Commodore James R. Paulds of Stevensville, applied for a marriage license so that he might wed the divorced woman. The license was made by Deputy Clerk of the Court Kane at noon and the couple repaired to the office of Justice of the Peace Frank Peschke, where the knot was tied in the presence of J. C. B. Calkins and Amanda McLane as witnesses.

Mr. Soranson of the Big Flat has been in the valley with his traction engine and has moved three houses belonging to Joe Sharp, Walter Tucker and Mr. Ransome. The report that there was a case of smallpox at one of the reclamation camps in the upper valley seems to be a mistake.

Should congress through the recommendation of President Wilson raise the embargo against the purchase by the Mexican revolutionists of arms and munitions of war in the United States, part of the war material for the equipment of the constitutionalists would pass through the customs house at Vera Cruz. the chief object of the power interests. "The ten great groups of water companies," the report said, "control 65 per cent of all the developed water power in the United States." "But the rapid growth of concentration," it added, "is even more striking than the amount of it. The amount of concentration has nearly doubled in two years. The fight for the conservation of the public water powers is first of all a fight against monopoly. The second prime necessity is to forbid and prevent the speculative holdings of powers unused." Declaring that the development of water power means "triple conservation" in that it not only conserves fuel but directly serves to promote the navigability of rivers, the majority reported that "it is essential that capital shall be attracted to these enterprises, and while we must, of course, fully protect the interests of the public, present and future, we are not conservationists if we advocate the imposition of the terms which restrict rather than encourage development." Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture, in the opening address, urged the necessity of better farm conditions, and said: "If we care for the conservation of our people, we shall be relieved of much of our concern about the conservation of our natural resources."

President's Address.

The address of Charles L. Pack of Indiana, president of the congress, at the opening session today clearly pointed out that the conservation movement is facing at present its greatest danger in the opposition to the federal control of the national resources, which is active in many states.

Certain corporations and private interests have started a movement to remove conservation from the control of the federal government and to transfer it to the state governments and it seems that, for purely selfish reasons, many members of state legislatures strongly favor the plan and are determined to make a strong fight, basing their opposition upon their interpretation of the principle of states' rights.

The real motive, however, on the part of the Cedar and Waterpower interests and of the legislators working hand in hand with them has nothing to do with the sovereign rights of the states. The big timber and waterpower interests, realizing the difficulty of obtaining concessions from the federal government, want the forest and water conservation removed from the control of the national government, believing that it will be easier for them to obtain what they want from the legislative bodies of the various states. The legislature favor the plan which would open the door to extensive grafting opportunities.

President's View

President Wilson, who delivered an address on the occasion of the opening of the congress, strongly favors national control of the natural resources of the country and it is evident that he will lend his full support to the conservation congress in its fight against the opposing elements. One of the problems to be considered by the congress is the question of more strongly and better organizing the national conservation movement throughout the country so as to establish perfect harmony in the work. The congress this year will revert to the consideration principally of forestry and water power subjects. At sharks, declaring that the states had thus far taken no steps in this direction.

Address by Mr. Lane

The National Association of Conservation commissioners was addressed by Secretary Lane, who made a plea for greater co-operation between the state and federal authorities. The secretary declared that the greatest obstacle in the preparation of an adequate conservation policy was the conflict between those who believed in centralization of government and those who believed in states' rights. This conflict, he said, was responsible for the difficulty the federal authorities experienced in obtaining the co-operation of state officials.

"Now, the government is not wedded to any particular theory, but it is wedded to practical tests that will develop something to better the country," continued Secretary Lane. "We are indifferent to the agency employed. You represent the states, I represent what is called the central government. We can co-operate and manifestly there can be no success unless we do co-operate."

Reforestation Essential

Reforestation was declared to be the remedy for the coming timber famine in the report of the sub-committee to the forestry section. "Successful commercial planting," the report concluded, "depends upon a good future market, lands of low value upon which to plant a choice of species suited to the needs of the market and to the conditions, local and regional, relative freedom from sources of damage, a low initial cost of planting and a return on the money invested equal at least to a fair return of interest. The long-time nature of the investment makes planting more feasible for the federal, state and local governments or long-lived corporations than that of individual or smaller companies."
