

TIDE DELAYS FLEET;
STARTS AT 10:45 A. M.

This command, signed by George C. Day, Commander, U. S. N., and chief patrol officer and fleet representative, and Dock Commissioner Smith, was issued last night:

In consequence of tidal conditions, the fleet of ships which will not sail at 9:30 A. M. on Tuesday, as previously announced. It is expected that the fleet will get under way at 10:45 A. M., proceeding at a speed of four or five knots.

Please instruct all captains operating ferries to be on the lookout for the United States Navy scout patrol steamer bearing the International N signal flag.

All ferries operating in the North River south of Forty-second street can make their regular trips up to 10:45 A. M. unless signalled to the contrary by the scout patrol steamer.

It is respectfully requested that no tugs or railroad boats be operated across the North River after 10:30 A. M. On notice from the scout patrol steamer all river craft must keep clear of the main channel until the fleet has passed out.

crowd to show all the fervor in its nature, and it also proved to be the signal for the hundreds of policemen and detectives to push and fight the thousands back from the curbs, to grab photographers by the necks and hustle them away, and even to forget the rights of the crowd to life, liberty and the pursuit of news. The police did all this in an effort to make a clear right of way up Fifth avenue for the President's automobile.

But the crowds were too many and too rampant. They ran after the President's car, shouting and yelling. Elderly women danced up and down like jumping jacks and old men, some of whom must have been rheumatic, felt a hurry of spirits which established instant communication with their lower limbs. The waves of the crowd pushed President Wilson's automobile up Fifth avenue as far as Forty-fifth street, a block further than the car was intended to go. These waves broke through the police dikes, 500 policemen, 325 detectives and a score of secret service agents to the contrary notwithstanding, and one man jumped on the running board of the President's car.

He stuck out his hand, but instead of a bomb or a revolver, which that hand would have had the opportunity to stick out, he wanted to grasp the hand of the President, and Mr. Wilson obliged him heartily.

Wait Hours to Cheer Him.

Then the secret service men and the police had things in hand again, and President Wilson, in his motorcade, proceeded with plenty of room for walking, although there too crowds waited to cheer him. When he came out of the hotel three hours later, the four Yachtsmen, jammed full of people, the Grand Central Station's elevated road holding the population of a small town and Madison Avenue, crowded full of persons waiting to catch a glimpse of him and to raise a cheer.

But this later demonstration came after luncheon. Before going up to the parade room, the President on the nineteenth floor for lunch, the President rested in a room on the eighteenth floor. There he received a call from Cornelius Vanderbilt, there he got word from Washington that other dispatches had arrived quoting newspapers abroad as saying that Germany's suggestion was the arbitration of the difficulties arising from the sinking of the Lusitania. There was nothing to announce at a result of these messages, said Secretary Tamm.

When the luncheon hour came the President walked into the big room on the nineteenth floor to the orchestra's strains of "The Biltmore." At the speaker's table he found himself

FLEET ROARS WELCOME
AS PRESIDENT PASSES

President Wilson looked upon the Atlantic fleet at rest in the North River yesterday afternoon after he had reviewed the parade of the sailors. He saw the sixteen big battleships swaying solemnly at anchorages as the Mayflower passed them by. He noted the big 12 inch and 14 inch guns with their menacing muzzles thrust out of the grim turrets. He saw the officers at attention, their gold lace showing up in contrast to the dull gray of the ships and the alert sailors manning the rails. He saw too the torpedo boats, the auxiliary fleet and the submarines.

The President also beheld the American ensign flying from both mastsheads of the sixteen battleships. There are two occasions when the Stars and Stripes fly from both masts. One is at a Presidential review; the other when the fleet goes into action.

The President's inspection of the fleet at the moment when the eyes of the nation are upon him in the crisis with Germany made the day all the more dramatic. His interest in the ships and the information that was made known to him by Secretary of the Navy Daniels aroused more than ordinary attention from the public.

As the guns boomed their salute to the President many thousands lined the paths and sidewalks of Riverside Drive and the heights of the Jersey shore. River craft, tugboats, sight seeing vessels and yachts also paid their tribute to him with varied cacophonies.

Stands With Head Bared.

Throughout the review the President stood on the bridge of the Mayflower, his head bared the greater part of the time in answer to salutes, and studied the warcraft. He was told that the fleet is prepared for action; that the men are trained and that the policy of preparedness, which has been the motto of the navy, has never been more effectively carried out than at the present time.

The President boarded the Mayflower off Fifth street shortly before 3 o'clock. As the Presidential pennant was broken at the mast of the yacht another was raised for a few minutes on the Dolphin, flying the flag of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, and carrying Mrs. Daniels and many invited guests. Next travelled the 14th, the new yacht of the Coast and Geodetic sitting between W. Butler Duncan and acting Mayor McAneny, Mr. Duncan, vice-chairman of the Mayflower committee, taking Cornelius Vanderbilt's place.

Also on the dais were Dr. Cary T. Grayson, Joseph H. Choate, who got a cheer at his entrance, Major-General George Barnett, U. S. M. C., Admiral Fletcher, commanding the Atlantic fleet, as every one ought to know by now; Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Secretary of the Interior Lane, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of Commerce Redfield, Senator O'Gorman, Major-General Wood, Rear Admiral Fisher, Bishop Greer, Rear Admiral Benson and Secretary Tamm.

Prominent at other tables were Perry Belmont, Archibald H. Watson, Finley J. Shepard, Rear Admiral Peary (retired), Chauncey M. Depew, George Gordon Battle, George T. Wilson, Rear Admirals Mayo, McLean and Housh, acting Governor Edight of New Jersey and Dock

Vera Cruz affair but now flagship of the second division in charge of Rear Admiral C. D. Bouché, were anchored off Grant's tomb.

The Virginia, the Rhode Island and the Nebraska were passed next and then the Mayflower came abreast the Georgia, which was praised as "being the prettiest manned of any ship in the battle-ship line." Past the New Hampshire and the Louisiana went the Mayflower, and then swinging she steamed to the east of the battleships and started down stream.

The trip back was made quickly and the Mayflower reached her anchorage below the Wyoming about 5 o'clock.

On the Dolphin Mrs. Daniels had among her guests Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who assisted Mrs. Daniels in receiving; Col. Daniel Appleton of the Seventh Regiment and Capt. Falls, his aid; Miss Appleton, Cleveland Dodge, Major-General George L. Barnett,

Commissioner Smith. There were hundreds of Rear Admiral Peary (retired), Chauncey M. Depew, George Gordon Battle, George T. Wilson, Rear Admirals Mayo, McLean and Housh, acting Governor Edight of New Jersey and Dock

Frederic Coudert, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Burleigh, Edmund L. Baylies, S. W. Fairchild, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Adamson and Borough President Marks. There was estimated that more than 100,000 persons thronged Riverside Drive in the afternoon. The crowd was orderly and gave little trouble to Inspector Ryan and 400 policemen under his command. One of the sightseeing vessels in the review was the Mandalay, chartered by the World to carry the families and friends of officers and blue-jackets.

In the fleet of sightseeing yachts encircling the warships last night was the yacht observation, chartered by the Bush Terminal Company for the use of a part of their office force. The first contingent made the trip on Saturday night. The yacht left Pier 5, Bush docks, Brooklyn, at 7:30 o'clock, with the employees and their families, stopped at the Battery to pick up the New York administration building force and proceeded up the North River to 130th street, where it lay to.

It was not until 11 o'clock last night that the President returned to the Mayflower, off Forty-first street, from Admiral Fletcher's flagship, the Wyoming. He went aboard the Wyoming at 7 last evening for the dinner given there in his honor and remained to witness the boat races and the water carnival.

UNRULY WOMAN ARRESTED.

A music teacher, who gave her name as Helen Barr of 500 West 122d street and who created considerable commotion near the reviewing stand on Fifth avenue during the parade by using an umbrella on Patrolman Leddy of Traffic C, who warned her to keep within the line, was found guilty of disorderly conduct by Magistrate House in Yorkville court yesterday.

Miss Barr said that she wanted to see the parade and that she otherwise, she developed, with special grand stand passes, went through the police lines she didn't see any reason that she shouldn't go too. She refused, she admitted, to obey the policeman's warnings and when he placed her under arrest began to use her umbrella. At the station house she refused all information about herself, but became less obstinate in court.

Magistrate House said it was time those women who seemed to think themselves entitled to special privilege learned to respect the law, admonished her severely and suspended sentence.

KILLED WATCHING PARADE.

While watching the parade yesterday morning an unidentified man about 30 years of age was killed by an auto truck at the entrance to an alley adjoining 4 East Twenty-seventh street.

The driver of the truck was not arrested. The victim wore a gray suit, brown shoes and tan socks. He was about 5 feet 6 inches in height and weighed 140 pounds.

FLASHES PARALLEL ON DEWEY.

Gardner Says Admiral's Praise of Navy Contradicts His Report.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Admiral Dewey's own words were quoted him today by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts in commenting on the letter from the Admiral to Secretary Daniels expressing satisfaction with the condition of the navy. In this letter, which was read by Secretary Daniels at the fleet dinner in New York, Admiral Dewey said:

"As President-General of the Board for fifteen years I can say that the efficient navy of the United States has steadily progressed and has never been so high as it is today."

"The best possible reply to this sentiment," said Mr. Gardner, "is found in Admiral Dewey's own words: 'The absence of any definite naval policy on our part, except in the General Board, and the failure of the people, the Congress and the Executive Government to recognize the necessity for such a policy has already placed us in a position of inferiority which may lead to war; and this inferiority is progressive and will continue to increase until the necessity for a definite policy is recognized and that policy put into operation.'"

"The above," Mr. Gardner added, "is a quotation from a letter signed George Dewey, president of the General Board of the Navy, addressed to Secretary Daniels in November, 1912."

"Admiral Dewey is a gallant old sailor, now in his seventy-eighth year. Perhaps he does not follow matters quite so closely as younger men, like Admiral Bradfisk, who on December 17, 1914, testified that it would take five years to get our entire fleet of ships ready to fight an efficient enemy."

SAILORS OF THE FLEET PASS THE PRESIDENT IN PARADE

PRESIDENT CHEERS
OARSMEN OF FLEET
ON THE NEW YORK

Dines on Wyoming, Watches Secretary Daniels Permits Ceremony, but It May Not Take.

The Atlantic fleet will steam out of the Hudson and out of New York harbor at 10:45 this morning to engage in the war game that will be played up and down the Atlantic coast for the next two weeks. President Wilson, aboard the Mayflower, near the Statue of Liberty, will review the fleet as it passes out.

It was not until 11 o'clock last night that the President returned to the Mayflower, off Forty-first street, from Admiral Fletcher's flagship, the Wyoming. He went aboard the Wyoming at 7 last evening for the dinner given there in his honor and remained to witness the boat races and the water carnival.

President Wilson established a precedent at this dinner, it was said, as it was the first time that the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy had ever sat down to dinner aboard a warship with all the Admirals and Captains of a fleet like the Atlantic fleet. Besides Admiral Fletcher, the Wyoming, the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, and his family, together with Rear Admiral Usher, commander of the Brooklyn navy yard, and Rear Admiral Benson, chief of the bureau of naval operations, who came from Washington especially for the dinner, Secretary Daniels and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt helped to complete the navy family.

The dinner was not served on the quarterdeck, as had been planned, but in the wardroom. At its conclusion the boat races of the crews of the battleships began.

Wins With Broken Oar.

The fleet was illuminated and each battleship directed its searchlights up and down the Hudson over the mile course on which the crews rowed. Thousands saw the first race between eight rowing boats won by a length, but they didn't know that it was the crew of the Texas that won, and that the stroke of that crew, Harry Schomaker, had broken his oar the very first pull he took at it. He kept on, however, and the crew gained the victory and a substantial sum of money.

The Virginia's crew was second, the Michigan's third and the Utah's fourth. The Wyoming won the second race. AMERICA ASKS NOTHING
BUT HER RIGHTS---WILSON

President in Speech at Biltmore Says This Country Takes Its Stand for Humanity—No Threat Against Any Nation.

The President's speech at the Biltmore was as follows:

"This is not an occasion upon which it seems to me, that it would be wise for me to make many remarks, but I should derive myself of a great gratification if I did not express my pleasure in being here, my gratitude for the splendid reception which has been accorded me as the representative of the nation and my profound interest in the navy of the United States."

"That is an interest with which I was apparently born, for it began when I was a youngster and was ripened with my knowledge of the affairs and policies of the United States. I think it is the natural instinctive judgment of the people of the United States that they express their power appropriately in an efficient navy, and their interest is partly, I believe, because that navy somehow is expected to express their character not within our own borders where that character is understood, but outside our borders, where it is hoped we may occasionally touch others with some slight vision of what America stands for."

Believes in Daniels and Navy.

"But before I speak of the navy of the United States, I want to take advantage of the first public opportunity I have had to speak of the Secretary of the Navy to express my confidence and my admiration and to say that he has my unqualified support, for I have counseled with him in intimate fashion. I know how sincerely he has had it at heart that everything the navy does and handles should be done and handled as the people of the United States wish them handled—because efficiency is something more than organization. Efficiency runs into every corner of the navy, and it is the method. Efficiency runs to the extent of listing the ideals of a service above every personal interest."

"So that when I speak my support of the Secretary of the Navy I am merely speaking my support of what I know every true lover of the navy to desire and to purpose, for the navy of the United States is a body specially trusted with the ideals of America."

"I like to imagine in my thoughts this ideal. These quiet ships lying in the river have no suggestion of bluster about them—no hint of pretension or show. They are commanded by men thoughtful of the duty of citizens as well as the duty of officers—men acquainted with the traditions of the great service to which they belong—men who know, by touch with the people of the United States, what sort of purposes they ought to entertain and what sort of discretion they ought to exercise in order to use those engines of force as engines to promote the interests of humanity.

"For the interesting and inspiring thing about America, gentlemen, is that she asks nothing for herself except what she has a right to ask for humanity itself. We want no nation's property; we wish to question no nation's honor; we wish to stand selflessly in the way of the development of no nation; we want nothing that we cannot get by our own legitimate enterprise and by the inspiration of our own example, and, standing for these things, it is not pretension on our part to say that we are privileged to stand for what every nation would wish to stand for and speaking for those things which all humanity must desire."

"When I think of the flag which those ships carry, the only touch of color about them, the only thing that moves as if it had a settled spirit in it, in their solid structure, it seems to me that I see alternate strips of parchment upon which are written the rights of liberty, of justice and strips of blood split to vindicate those rights; and then, in the corner, a prediction of the blue serene into which every nation may swim which stands for those great things."

"The mission of America is the only thing that a sailor or soldier should think about: to have nothing to do with the formulation of her policy; he is to support her policy whatever it is—he is to support her policy in the spirit of herself, and the strength of our policy is that we, who for the time being administer the affairs of this nation, do not originate her spirit; we attempt to embody it; we attempt to realize it in action; we are dominated by it; we do not dictate it. And so with every man in arms who serves the nation, he stands and waits to do the thing which the nation desires.

"America sometimes seems, perhaps, to forget her programme or rather I would say that sometimes those who represent her seem to forget her programme, but the people never forget. It is as startling as it is touching, to see wherever you touch a principle you touch the hearts of the people of the United States. They listen to your debates of policy, they determine which party they will prefer to power, they choose and prefer as ordinary men, but they realize that the real force of their real irresistible momentum is for the ideals which men embody."

"I never go on the streets of a great city without feeling that somehow I do not confer elsewhere than on the streets with the great spirit of the people themselves, going about their business, attending to the thing which concerns them, and yet carrying a treasure at their hearts all the while ready to be stirred not only as individuals, but as members of a great nation of hearts that constitutes a patriotic people."

"And so this sight in the river touches me merely as a sample of that, and it quickens the pulse of every man who realizes these things to have anything to do with them."

"When a crisis occurs in this country, gentlemen, it is as if you put your hand on the pulse of a dynamo; it is as if the things which you were in connection with were spiritually reborn. You had nothing to do with them, except if you listen truly, speak the things that you hear.
