

BATTLESHIP UTAH AS SHE WILL LOOK WHEN COMPLETED

This picture which was secured from the navy department by The Herald's Washington correspondent gives an excellent idea of the appearance of the battleship Utah as she will look when completed. No drawing of the Utah has been made as yet, but the picture of the vessel reproduced above, is exactly similar in exterior design to the Utah, as planned by the naval architects. The new fighting masts will be noted as a distinctive feature. Owing to the constant progress that is being made in naval construction it is quite possible that the present plans for the Utah will undergo some slight change.

GRAND DUKE ALEXIS DEAD

Uncle of Emperor Nicholas Victim of Pneumonia—Visited United States in 1872.

Paris, Nov. 14.—Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, an uncle of Emperor Nicholas, died in this city today of pneumonia. The grand duke had lived in Paris almost continuously since his retirement from the position of supreme director of the navy, which he held for twenty-four years.

Grand Duke Alexis was born in 1850. He resigned the supreme control of the marine in October, 1905, following savage criticism of his administration of the navy, especially in the construction of ships. Charges of mismanagement and inefficiency against the marine department had been current for years, and after the war with Japan they increased tenfold. Grand Duke Alexis himself did not escape personal attacks, and scandal was so busy with his name that he was several times the subject of public demonstrations, notably at the French theatre in St. Petersburg the latter part of 1904. The grand duke visited the United States in 1872.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 14.—The news of the death in Paris of the Grand Duke Alexis was received in St. Petersburg this afternoon. It has made little impression on Russian society. The grand duke, after his retirement from supreme control of the navy, dropped entirely out of public notice. He has resided chiefly abroad, and he visited St. Petersburg only for the family anniversaries, at which all the members of the imperial family are expected to be present. His role in the disastrous naval campaign with Japan has long since been put into the background by the more important questions of social reorganization that have arisen since the war. The usual court mourning will be observed. The imperial hunt now in progress in the vicinity of Peterhof was abandoned today, and the imperial theatres have been closed. The death of Alexis was announced to the duma during the election of a president for that body, and at the suggestion of M. Khomyakoff the house rose as a mark of respect.

well and will probably recover. I hope you will accept my deep sympathy. Like every other good American, I hold your husband in peculiar regard for the fearless way in which he has attacked and exposed corruption without any regard to the political or the social prominence of the offender, or to the dangerous character of the work. Your husband has taken his life in his hands in doing this great task for our people, and he is entitled to the credit and esteem, and above all to the heartiest support, of all good citizens. The infamous character of the man who has assaulted him should add not only to the horror and detestation felt for the deed, but to the determination of all decent citizens to stamp out the power of all men of his kind.

Telegram to Mr. Spreckles.

The following is the text of the telegram to Mr. Spreckles:

"White House, Nov. 14.—Rudolph Spreckels, San Francisco. I am immensely shocked at the attempted assassination of Heney, and most earnestly hope that he will recover. The infamous character of the would-be assassin no less than the infamous character of the deed, call attention in a striking way to the true character of the forces against which Heney and you and your assistants have been struggling. Every decent American who has the honor and interest of the country at heart should join, not only in putting a stop to the wave of violence of which this man's act is but one of the symptoms, but also in stamping out the heinous corruption in which men like this would-be assassin are bred and flourish, and that can only be done by war, as Heney has warred relentlessly against every man who is guilty of corrupt practices without any regard to his social standing, to his prominence in the world of politics or in the world of business. I earnestly hope that Heney will recover, and give utterance to what I know would be Heney's wish, when I say that I earnestly hope that, whether he recover or not, there will be no faltering in the work in which Heney has been so gallant and efficient a leader. (Signed)

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Bonaparte Shocked.

Baltimore, Nov. 14.—Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte, who was here today, said of the attempt on the life of Francis J. Heney:

"I was shocked to hear of the attempted murder of Mr. Heney, and deem it a matter of the gravest public interest that his life should be spared. His services have been of great value to the department of justice, and he is emphatically a man to be esteemed because of the enemies he has made him a terror to evildoers, so that it is not really surprising if an attempt has been made to take his life. I know of no one who has shown more hatred to iniquity or done more effective work in making the way of the transgressor hard. American society sorely needs more men of his type, and can ill afford to lose one like him."

Volunteer Attorney.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—District Attorney W. H. Langdon, who arrived this morning from Fresno, announced that he would accept the services of Matt L. Sullivan, Hiram Johnson and J. J. Dwyer, three men chosen in this emergency stand high in the ranks of their profession. Each has a large practice, demanding constant attention, yet has volunteered for what may prove a lengthy period without remuneration of any kind.

URAMIC POISONING.

Former Governor Smith of Montana Critically Ill.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 14.—Former Governor R. B. Smith of Montana is critically ill with uramic poisoning in the Kalispell hospital, and little hopes of his recovery are entertained. He was a member of the constitutional convention, was United States district attorney under Cleveland's first administration, and was governor of Montana four years, his term ending Jan. 1, 1901. He is a native of Kentucky, but came to Montana in the early days of the state. After he left the governor's office he practiced law in Butte several years, but when his health failed about two years ago he moved to Kalispell on his fruit farm.

KINDEL LOADED WITH HOT SHOT FOR THE RAILROADS

Mr. Case, president of the Trans-Mississippi congress, has called the attention of the United States to the magnitude of this section, as follows: "It should not be forgotten that the Trans-Mississippi section has a population of nearly 30,000,000; a country producing more corn, wheat, cotton and other agricultural products than any similar area on the face of the globe. Its mines yield silver and gold by the shipload, and coal enough to supply the world. This section, during the past fifteen years, has increased the value of its agricultural products from $70,000,000 to $1,750,000,000, or more than 14 per cent. Who can tell what the next decade will bring in the magnificent outpouring of wealth from this great granary of the world? Those who have watched the upbuilding of this magnificent portion of our nation and have helped to develop it realize that, with this increasing production, there comes a large problem of transportation. The interstate commerce commission, page 27 of the eighteenth annual report, said of the Kindel vs. the A. T. & S. F. R. case:

"A railroad is not justified in discriminating against a community or an individual by the fact that the person or locality so discriminated against is not directly injured. The law declares that, under like circumstances and conditions, every individual, every commodity and every community shall be treated alike and the fact that they are not, is a violation of law. The denial of a legal right is itself an injury."

Some years ago I invented a single sheet curled cotton comforter. This cotton comforter has been copied by Cincinnati and other eastern manufacturers. Now you would naturally think that we, being as close to the cotton fields as Cincinnati, and 1,200 miles nearer to the Pacific coast than Cincinnati, that the Denver manufacturers would have a geographical advantage over the Cincinnati manufacturers on Pacific coast trade. But the reverse is true. For example:

Freight on 100 pounds raw cotton to Denver	.....$ .70
Freight on 100 pounds raw cotton to Cincinnati	.....$ .30
Freight on 100 pounds comforter coverings, New York to Denver	.....$1.30
Freight on 100 pounds comforter coverings, New York to Cincinnati	.....$ .48
Against Denver, per cwt.	.....$1.72

Waiting for a Ruling.

The freight rate on the manufactured comforter to the Pacific coast from Cincinnati is the same as from Denver. Thus, you see, the Denver manufacturer has either got to go out of business or move his plant to Cincinnati or other eastern points. It is this sort of transportation rates that have lost Denver and this trans-Mississippi section so many plants and millions of investments. Thus, you will observe, while we are rich producers we are poor manufacturers. The Kindel case No. 951, heard over two years ago by the interstate commerce commission in Denver, and which covers this sort of transportation handicap, is still without a ruling.

Our express rates are equally as discriminatory as the freight rates. This discrimination is in vogue in both directions, as, for instance, the rate on apples, carload from Oregon orchard fields to England, is $1.00 per cwt., while a box of apples to Denver is charged $3.00. These examples of discriminatory transportation rates might be multiplied by the thousands.

The interstate commerce commission has been given more power to regulate commerce, but so far has failed to give us material relief; therefore, we now ask that the guarantee of the United States constitution be accorded us: "No preference shall be given, by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one state over those of another," and to establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, and promote the general welfare, by granting citizens of our state and section "all the privileges and immunities of other citizens" east and west of us."

What we need is a universal classification and equitable rates, as well as a universal bill of lading. Won't you please help us? Awaiting your reply, with best wishes, I am,
Very truly yours,
GEORGE J. KINDEL.

Poor Tools and A Good Worker

That Is What Makes Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Taste, Foul Breath and Catarrh.

The stomach is a good, strong vital organ, which is constantly protecting and feeding every other organ of the body. It is the most abused, neglected and scorned member of man also. Most men abuse their stomachs with under-cooked food, high living, alcohol, tobacco, pastries and scores of other unhealthy practices.

When the stomach at last sickens of all this abuse and cannot do its full duty, most men are not warned, but keep up their assaults on the stomach until at last it rebels and begins to strike back and cry for help. Man by his own abuse has taken away from the stomach the tools to work with.

These tools are the gastric juices which go to make up the digestive agents. From seven to thirty-five pounds of gastric juice are turned into the stomach every day.

When poor, poisonous food consumes this juice, dilutes it, robs it of its strength and throws it, a fermented mass, from the system, there is just that much of the gastric fluid which cannot be readily supplied by the blood.

When food comes into a stomach filled with depleted fluids lacking of powers to do their part, the good, strong stomach is using poor tools and, of course, cannot succeed in its work.

A condition which often prevails is that which takes place when the gastric juice contains too much alkali. If the juice were wholly alkaline it would not only devour and digest the food, but would eat and digest the stomach itself. Such gastric juice does the digestion no good and attacks the walls of the stomach, making them raw and sore and setting up inflammation and irritation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will strengthen a stomach filled with poor gastric juice. They will remove any abnormal alkaline condition, allay irritation, sweeten the breath, remove catarrhal conditions and digest food no matter how the stomach has acted before.

These little tablets contain an ingredient, one grain of which will digest perfectly 300 grains of food. They will digest an entire meal placed in a jar without the aid of any other force except themselves. They have demonstrated this time after time.

Every druggist carries them in stock, price 50 cents, and 4000 physicians use them in their practice. Send us your name and address and we will mail you at once a trial package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Your Dress Clothes

Are of Much Importance

You have noticed at large social events that some men seem at home in their clothes, while others often seem ill at ease.

The man who wears a Hart Schaffner & Marx dress suit is usually at his best. He has the knowledge that his clothes are made right and that he is, clothingly speaking, the peer of any man.

Then he feels comfortable. These suits are made large and roomy. Plenty of room for action; hence they are particularly desirable at dancing parties.
