WILL FIGHT TO THE END.

Judge Wood Makes an Important Ruling.

BECKER ON TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Constable Quinlan of Fruitvale Victorious in a New Year Fight.

OAKLAND.-The will of Marie Louisa Lemon, who left property of the value of $12,000 to the "trumpet medium," Mrs. Mary Smith, and her husband, George Smith, was broken by the jury yesterday in Judge Ogden's court.

The contestants were Rachel Neal, a sister of Mrs. Lemon, and Dr. Jefferies, a nephew.

The verdict was a surprise, because the court had made a ruling on the issues presented favorable to proponents, and it was not thought that, therefore, the verdict would be otherwise than favorable to the

The contestants agreed that they had a right to go before the jury on the issues of unsoundness of mind and undue influence. The latter, Judge Ogden ruled, there was not sufficient evidence to sustain, and then the argument of the case was begun on the insanity quastien.

on the insanity question on the insanity question.

The sid- of contestants was opened by Lawyer Tappan who was followed by Judge Nusbaumer for the trumpet medium. He in turn was followed by A.
S. Hall, and A. A. Moore closed for proponents. Judge Campbell closed the case for the other side, and the court read the instructions, which were lengthy, but again impressed the jurymen with the point that they must not consider undue influence in arriving at a verdict.

The only questions they were to answer Was Mrs. Lemon sane or insane at the time

The other question was: Was Mrs. Lemon laboring under an insane delusion at the time she made her will, and, if, so, did that affect her test mentary act?

To this latter question the jury, by a vote of ten to two, answered "Yes." They considered the two questions for nearly an hour.

The verdict is regarded as a peculiar one among attorneys and the attorneys for the propenent are of the opinion that it cannot stand and on Friday next will argue for its setting aside.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were seen last night in their rooms at the Huff House and were very much surprised at the outcome of the case. They said it was the most peculiar way of deciding the case and their lawyers had told them that it could not possibly stand.

When asked if he was ready to give up the fight Mr. Smith said:

Smith said:

"She was her sisier. I have the whole family record. It is also true that Mrs. Lemon had brothers, despite the evidence of Mrs. Neal to the contrary. The frouble with Mrs. Neal is that she knew very little of the family history because she left home at 14, and if the facts were known it would be found that she should be the last one to tell such stories of Mrs. Lemon's habits and life."

The Smiths feel very bitter over the whole affair, and no doubt propose to make a stormy fight for the property of Mrs. Lemon.

No More Jury Trials.

Violators of the city ordinances were given a genuine surprise yesterday morning by Judge Wood of the Police Court. It has been customary for them to demand a jury trial and then the case would be set about six months ahead. When it came to trial one or the other of the attorners would be busy and a three ahead. When it came to trial one or the other of the attorneys would be busy and a three months' continuation would be asked. By this means a year would ship by before the trial would be had, and as a consequence many of the witnesses would disappear and others would be had, and as a consequence many of the witnesses would disappear and others would be unable to remember every detail of the occurrence. Then the jury would acquit.

When the case of Herman Kohler, charged with violating an ordinance in keeping his saloon open after 12 o'clock midnight, was called he pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial through his attorney, T. F. Garrity. To his astonishment the Judge refused the request and said that the defendant would have to stand trial before the court.

In speaking of the ruling he said: "I base this action on the provisions of the Whitney act passed by the State Legislature in 1885. That statute provides for the establishment of Police courts in cities of from 30,000 to 100,000 inhabitants and practically applies only to the city of Oakland and the city of Los Angeles. The Supreme Court may overrule me, but I don't care if it does. I am going to try to stop some of this expense that the city is obliged to stand. I have corresponded with the Police Judge of Los Angeles on this point, and he declares that he has not granted a jury trial in an ordinance violation. granted a jury trial in an ordinance violation case for six years, and when an appeal has been taken to the Superior Court, the Whitney act had always been held to be valid, and his ruling had always been held to be valid, and his ruling in refusing a jury indorsed."

After setting forth that Police courts have jurisdiction over various petty offenses, including the violation of city ordinances, the act goes on in the following language: "And in such of the cases enumerated in this section in which trial by jury is not secured by the constitution of the State, he (the Police Judge) may proceed to judgment in the first instance without a jury; but on appeal the defendant shall be entitled to trial by jury in the Superior Court."

Charged With Murder.

Charged With Murder.

The trial of Charles Becker, who is charged with the murder of Clinton A. Edson, in Alameda last May, was begun before Judge Greene yesterday morning. All of the day was occupied selecting a jury. M. C. Chapman and Thomas Bradley are the attorney for the defendant, while District Attorney Charles Snook is prosecuting for the people.

Edson has been in jail since the deed was done, and seems to have no friends. He has never made a statement as to why he did the deed. The evidence for the people is well known. Benson had been an employe of Edson at the Terrace Baths for many years in an inferior position. He claimed that Edson owed him a large amount. They had a dispute and Becker was discharged. Edson said at the time that Becker had been drinking heavily and became unfit for his duties. One day Becker was walking down Webster street, ha Alameda, when he met Edson. A few words passed. Then Becker, it is claimed, drew a revolver and began to shoot. Edson was struck in the heart and dropped dead.

The Constable the Victor.

The Constable the Victor.

Constable J. M. Quinlan of the Fruitvale District has made himself obnoxious to evil-doers, and on New Year night inve able-bodied young fellows took it into their heads to "do him up" for fancied wrongs. They hunted him up and waded into him. Quinlan fought shy of trouble as long as he could and then assumed the offensive, and shortly one of the gang, Ben Harris, had handcuffs on and was bundled aboard a San Leandro car and brought into Oakland. The rest of the crowd scatter-d, excepting a brother of Harris, who came down to Oakland, endeavoring on the way to get the plucky constable to take the handcuffs from his brother's wrists. It would not do, however, and the constable marched the brother to the County Jail, where he was compelled to stay until I A. M. yesterday, when an order came down from Justice La Rue to turn Harris loose.

Constable Quinlan is determined to push the matter, however, and says he will swear out warrants for the arrest of the rest of the gang. A Haywards Capitalist.

Is William a Bad Boy? Mrs. Hennessey of 43 Sixth street had her son William, a bright 16-year-old boy, in the Police Court yesterday morning, claiming that he was incorrigible. She testified that he was dishonest and in the habit of staying out late at night.

A fruit-peddier named McVey testified that William had worked for him for two months, always turned his money over to his mother Saturday nights and was never out late except when at work. The case was continued thirty days and Attorney McCluin made a few caustic remarks about a mother who was so anxious to send her boy to an industrial school.

The little one was playing about the stove when her mother was at work, and, while the latter had her back turned for a moment, the baby reached up and pulled a kettle of boiling water on herself. Her face and body were frightfully burned. Dr. Huntington was called in, but the child died half an hour after his arrival. The accident occurred at 4 o'clock and death relieved the little one at 8 o'clock.

In Honor of Mrs. Lipman. During her life the late Mrs. Lipman was one of the most vicorous laborers on a committee having in hand the securing of a library for the Potter Sunday-school. The Potter Sunday-school of West Berkeley is maintained as a mission by the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian Church of East Berkeley. Sixty volumes had been added to the library at the time of Mrs. Lipman's death. Since that time about sixty volumes more have been donated as a tribute to Mrs. Lipman, and at a meeting of the committee it was decided to call the library the Mrs. F. C. Lipman Memorial Library.

There were many things I might have stated on the witness-stand regarding the feeling of mother (Mrs. Lemon) for ber sister, for I know that Mrs. Neal has never treated her in a sisterly manner, but I did not want to say anything that might bring me newspaper notoriety."

When asked about the claim of Mrs. Lemon, that Mrs. Neal has never the alleged daughter of Mrs. Lemon, that Mrs. Neal has never the alleged daughter of Mrs. Lemon, that Mrs. Neal was not a sister of Mrs. Lemon, Mrs. Smith said:

Later she was turned broadside to the sea, but instead of rolling, as many expected she would, the ram proved to be very steady and stiff—as much so as any vessel that ever went out of the Kennebec. Altogether the ram showed remarkable seaworthiness for a vessel of her construction. The forced draught was not tried at all, and for half an hour under natural draught the ram moved at the rare of fourteen and a half knots. At no time was the boiler pressure within thirty pounds of the allowed pressure under the wake left was beautiful. The ram's bottom is now badly foul. She will be taken to the navy-yard at Charlestown, Mass., within a few days, where she will be prepared for the official speed trial, which will occur on Long Island Sound, off New London. She is designed when preparing for an engagement to be partly submerged by the use of feurteen 8-inch Kingston valves, one in each transverse compartment, with sluice valves in the vertical keel and also in the longitudinals of her compartments.

and also in the longitudinals of her compartments.

The bracket and longitudinal system is used in the hull, with an inner boathead to the stern. The longitudinals and girders supporting the deck are continuous, converging to the stem casting and to the stern, the frames and beams being intercostal. The vertical keel, two longitudinals and armor shelf on each side of the vertical keel are water-tight, forming, transversely, six compartments, these being divided longitudinally by water-tight frames. By this means the space between the inner and outer skin is divided into seventy-two compartments. The transverse and longitudinal bulkheads between the inner skin and the deck armor divide this space into thirty compartarmor divide this space into thirty compartments, making a total of 102 compartments in

Above the rounding deck only the conningtower, with 18-inch armor, the smoke-pipe, ventilators and skid beams for the boats will show. As a means of defense against light craft, such as torpedo-boats, the Katahdin will carry four 6-pounder rifles. She will probably suffer but little should sne ever enter an engagement, for she offers but a poor target, being so nearly all under water as she is and with the part exposed so shaped that a square impoct of a shot is impossible. The outside stroke of the deck armor is 6 inches thick, and the next inboard tapers from 5½ to 2½, which last is the thickness for the remainder, including the lower course of plating. The side armor is two strokes in depth, the upper six inches thick and the lower one three inches. The hatches have armored plates, and the smokepipes and ventilators have 6 inches of armor.

pipes and ventilators have 6 inches of armor.

Great Powers of the Katahdin.

The Katahdin's engines are in separate compartments and each is wholly independent of the other. The cylinder diameters are 25, 36 and 56 inches, with a common stroke of 36 inches. The boilers are intended for a working pressure of 160 pounds to the square inch, and besides two double-ended Scatch boilers, 22½ feet long and 13½ feet in diameter, there is a single-ended boiler of the same diameter and 11½ feet long. The forced draught is on the closed fireroom system. The propellors are three-bladed and of manganese bronze, 10 feet and 6 inches in diameter. The quarters for officers and men are in the stem of the ram, and everything possible has been done to give the men good conditions, although the space is smail. Blowers in the engine and fire room will exhaust the foul air, and fresh air is supplied from the main ventilator through air dnots led along the under side of the deck. Any apartment can be pumped out by the steam pumps, and the electric lighting will be arranged in duplicate, so as to provide against accidents.

The Katahdin will be her own offensive weapon. When she makes her impact at seventeen or eightien knots she will strike a blow of 400,000-foot tons, a force capable, her designers and builders claim, of sending any craft that floats immediately to the bottom. Admiral Ammen, in laboring and working so long as he did for the construction of this craft, always maintained that five such vessels could police our coast sufficiently against any naval force that could be sent against us. He also claimed, and it is undoubtedly true, that the five rams could be maintained as cheaply as one battle-ship. Should the Katahdin show herself enough of a success to warrant the construction of this craft, always maintained that five such vessels will be made to fit the ram bows of similar vessels it is not at all improbable that altempts will be made to fit the ram bows of ramming, and the same is true of all the navies of Europe, m Great Powers of the Katahdin.
