A EUROPEAN WAR.

Speculation in this country is again ripe, and since the reported arrest of GARIBOLDI by King VICTOR EMANUEL it is in some quarters judged that a European war is imminent. It is asserted that French troops have already left Paris for the Eternal City, and this fact is looked upon as a clear intimation from NAPOLEON that he will defend the Papal power at any and every hazard. It has heretofore been supposed that VICTOR EMANUEL and GARIBOLDI had an understanding, and that whatever the latter might do to overthrow the power of the Pope would be sanctioned by the King of Italy. The fact that VICTOR EMANUEL has arrested the hero of Ospromonte, and thus put a sudden stop to his warlike demonstrations against Rome, puts a somewhat different phase upon affairs. NAPOLEON may find himself overmastered in this stroke of policy of VICTOR EMANUEL, and his hot haste in sending French troops to Rome may not redound to his credit to the extent he imagined. VICTOR EMANUEL himself may be found to be the staunch defender of the Papal throne, and the esclat which LOUIS NAPOLEON hoped to appropriate to himself by his alacrity in aid of PIUS IX may not avail him on this occasion.

While we can see no particular cause to molest the temporal power of the Pope, any more than his spiritual authority, being neither the advocate of the one or the other, but perfectly willing that each should be controlled by the march of events, still we have never believed that the French Emperor had any very sincere desire to aid the Pope in maintaining his supremacy.

The truth is, NAPOLEON is jealous of the growing power of Prussia, and the attempt of that Government to extend its dominion over the States south of the Main, in contravention of the treaty of Prague, as it is alleged, has kept him in constant alarm. It is even asserted that so completely is NAPOLEON absorbed in watching the movement of Prussia that it has been conjectured that he would find no time to devote to the defence of the Pope, and it is declared that this very fact led GARIBOLDI to precipitate his ill-starred movement against Rome.

Be this as it may, VICTOR EMANUEL has anticipated him and relieved Rome from the threatened attack; and NAPOLEON may withdraw his troops, if he has sent them, and keep up his constant espionage over KING WILLIAM, BISMARCK and VON BIESEN, or he may inaugurate another conference like that recently held at Slaburg-Rome, for the present, is safe; but whether NAPOLEON will be able to check the growing ambition of Prussia, is not so clear.

The struggle for empire between the wily man of the Tuilleries and the profound and cunning statesmen of Prussia is not at an end, and what is to be its finae in the womb of the future. In the meantime the world looks on with much solicitude.

PERSONAL.

GENERAL SICKLES, it is understood, does not succeed in bringing his official conduct before a court of inquiry for examination. He left Washington yesterday.

N. P. BANKS has gone to Mexico on a short visit.

IT IS DECLARED that the President has decided to re-open the Fitz John Porter case and give him a new trial.

From Annapolis.

ANNAPOLIS, Sept. 23, 1867.

The United States sloop-of-war Dale, which left Annapolis in June last with the Savannah and Macedonian on a cruise with the midshipmen of the Naval Academy, arrived to-day after a very rough and tedious voyage. She left the rest of the fleet in the English channel. They had a severe storm and eight days' sail within three days' sail of the United States. All hands on board were worn out and on short rations. The midshipmen of the Macedonian and Savanna had all given up their share of the work of the ship, when they resume their studies.

The examination of candidates for admission to the academy is going on at present. P. Bushee, of Raleigh, North Carolina, passed to-day. Eugene C. Timmons and William J. Mitchell, of St. Louis, were rejected. F. E. Sawyer, of East Hampton, Massachusetts, passed to-day.

YESTERDAY was known as Diplomatic day at the State Department; yet not a single foreign diplomat called. Does this not show a fine condition of our foreign affairs?
